1. Jewish Community of Krakow. Homage of the Chief Rabbi and Jewish Community of Kazimierz to Prince Karl Von Auersprg, Krakow: 1796. Printed on Silk. Krakow, 1796. [10182]

1 bifolium (17.25 x 9.5 inches.; 440 x 240 mm). Printed on pink silk in black ink on three of four sides, one intentionally blank. The formal paying of homage to the ruling authorities was a vestige of medieval feudal practices in which each of the various constituent estates within the realm swore allegiance to the ruler who in turn guaranteed their protection. Jews had long been seen as a separate constituency within the European nations in which they lived, disconnected from the nobility, the peasantry and the merchant classes. Thus it was incumbent to offer their allegiances as a separate group. Naturally the paying homage required renewal whenever a change occurred in the composition of the reigning authority. Following the third and final partition of Poland in 1775, Krakow and the adjacent Jewish city Kazimierz fell under Austrian rule. This item documents the formal homage to Prince Karl Joseph Anton von Auersperg (1720-1800), a member of the princely family of Auersperg originally from Carniola, one of the hereditary Habsburg duchies in what is now Slovenia.

Created for formal presentation to the Prince, the document was printed on luxurious silk rather than on paper or parchment, as a way of demonstrating the exceedingly high esteem in which the Jewish community held their secular ruler.

Bergen Belsen was the only concentration camp to be liberated by the British. He describes the conditons prevailing within the camps and the horrific impact these sights had upon him. Here are some extracts - "Yesterday I went around the camp with a Doctor who commands a Hygeine Section. We estimated that there were some 2,000 bodies lying on the ground, - there will be more tomorrow. We saw every one of them except those at the bottom of the piles. I never thought in my wildest ravings that I should ever bury even one hundred people at the same time. Tomorrow with a Roman Catholic and Jewish Chaplain, I am burying over 4,000 people in a communal grave. It cannot be visualised. It has to be seen to be believed." "and there were German women to run the female part of the camp. I have seen them - stony faced hard tough women. At times they were even more vicious and diabolical than the S.S. men. Somebody christened them the 'Brides of Hell.'" He ends off "All I have written about I have seen. And what I have seen I shall never forget. NEVER." Appended to the report are a few pages from a printed report - Appendix "O" to Chapter VII - (entitled) Belsen Concentration Camp [paginated 399 - 411 the second part is Annexure "B" to Appendix "O" to Chapter VII.
